Faceless YouTube Channel

Actually, it's another type of content creation. However, you won't need to show your face, and you do even need to know something to start creating. By using current technologies, you can automate the whole process of creating YouTube videos and earn money from them absolutely passively.

First of all, you need to choose a niche. Then you'll need a script for your video. You can write it yourself or use something like Rytr or Jarvis. These are the most popular AI services for writing, and you can use them to have them write for you.

After you have a script for the video, you'll need to add some voiceover. Again, you can do it yourself or use some service, such as Murf. It will read your script like a real person, not a robot. It's an excellent option if you don't have a good microphone or simply don't want to use your own voice.

And the final step is to have the video itself. You can go to Pexels and check for free stock videos that you can use as a background. However, there's also a way to automate by using AI. It's called Pictory.ai and it simply adds a collage of different videos related to your topic and makes it more professional.

You can also add subtitles and many other cool features. It is important to mention that even if you want to automate everything, you should check manually at each step. Sometimes you will need to rewrite several sentences or change the background video.

In a nutshell, creating a faceless YouTube account and consistently uploading videos is a great way to earn extra money, especially since you can automate the entire process and make it completely passive.
